Col. White:

In response to the Director's question about Plan D (use of the Navy Bldg.), reported that he had been able to reduce the cost from [REDACTED] and noted that one of the problems was that of air conditioning equipment. The Director indicated that he was willing to make a reasonable swap of air conditioning units, bearing in mind that most of ours were new and most of those in the Navy building would be near the end of their useful lives. The Director noted further that in the discussion with Mr. Staats last week, he had been assured that CIA would get the full amount originally requested for air conditioners.
